Long Beach Airport Update

The JetBlue hearing to consider the carrier's appeal of noise violation fines will not be coming to City Council on March 13th as previously scheduled. This item, which is separate from the review of the Noise Ordinance fine structure, was specifically an appeal to City Council related to the Airport Director's decision to uphold fines applied to JetBlue for late night curfew violations. We do not have a date for the item to come to council, but it could be later this spring.

And Finally

Buffum School Name Has a Rich History

Buffum, in CD4's Artcraft Manor neighborhood, was the elementary school I attended, so returning there next week for Read Across America has very special meaning. The school was named after Charles A. Buffum who was a civic leader and co-founder of Buffums' Department Store. He served on the Board of Education for six years, was president of the Chamber of Commerce and served as mayor of Long Beach from 1921 to 1924. His daughter, Dorothy Mae Buffum, married LA Times publisher, Norman Chandler, and was a cultural leader known for her efforts on behalf of the performing arts. The Dorothy Chandler Pavilion in Los Angeles was named in her honor.

There is one obscure architectural element that connects Buffum School to the Buffums' in downtown Long Beach. The stylized "B" on the front of the school is similar to the Buffums' "Autoport" (parking lot) sign created in 1940. The school was built 10 years later, but it appears there may have been a connection.
