Robert Gumbiner Park Grand Opening

A Grand Opening ceremony for Robert Gumbiner Park at 880 East 7th Street was held on April 23.

Mayor Robert Garcia said, “We have invested years into this park to provide much needed recreational open space, a safer environment, and a safer traffic intersection for Long Beach residents.”

The 36,590 square-foot park includes a small performance area, a playground, skate plaza, shade structures, a picnic area and public art pieces donated by the nearby Museum of Latin American Art (MoLAA) and Pacific Island Ethnic Art Museum (PIEAM).

The park’s sustainable design features include recycled pavement, a bioswale that retains and filters storm water, large canopied trees and new green space in a built-out area.

“Gumbiner Park is a game changer for this park-poor area of the city,” said Councilwoman Lena Gonzalez. “This new park will bring people out of their homes to experience new activities such as yoga, the arts, and skateboarding.”

Additional infrastructure improvements to the area include street enhancements and new sidewalks that meet current disabled access regulations. The park will benefit approximately 32,000 residents who live within a half-mile radius.

The park is named for Dr. Robert Gumbiner, a health care pioneer and philanthropist who opened the nearby MoLAA in 1996. Dr. Gumbiner grew his small medical practice into one of the largest HMO’s in the country, FHP International. He insisted that his business “provide the most care to the most people for the least amount of money.” Dr. Gumbiner also founded the PIEAM, opening in October 2010, nearly two years after he died in January 2009 at the age of 85.

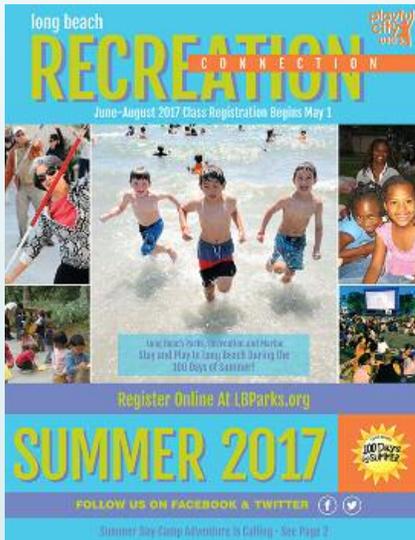

The development of the park was made possible through $2.83 million in funds secured from the Statewide Park Development and Community Revitalization Program (Prop 84).

Measure A - Your Tax Dollars At Work Creating New Safe Places to Play

With the passage of the Measure A ballot initiative in June 2016, Long Beach voters showed support for making their city a great place to live, work and play. Measure A adds a sales tax for the next ten years on retail sales in the City to pay for public safety and infrastructure enhancements.

Out of the estimated $25.7 million in revenue during the first year, Parks, Recreation and Marine will have $6,248,000 million allocated to improve parks and Animal Care Services facilities. Among the projects in the first year are five new playgrounds. The new parks will offer ADA improvements compared to the equipment they are replacing and are budgeted at $700,000 each. Rubberized safety surfacing, shade structures, bike racks, benches, trash cans and signage will make visits to the new playgrounds a comfortable experience. Construction will begin in the fall and completed by December 2017. The five sites are:

Drake Park

Inspired by the unique historic craftsman homes in the area with abundant native plant gardens, a butterfly theme was selected. The existing playground will be replaced with new 2-5 year old and 5-12 year old playground structures, climbing structures and swings.

Los Cerritos

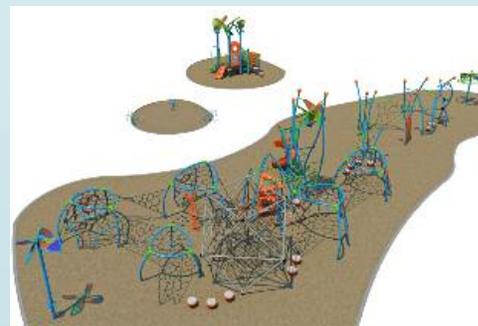

Los Cerritos Park youth will enjoy playing in the tree-house themed equipment that blends well in the heavily wooded park and adjacent neighborhood. A slope adjacent to playground will be used for embankment slides, climbing structures, and a zip line. The existing playground will be replaced with new 2-5 year old and 5-12 year old play structures, climbing structures and swings that incorporate wooden pole facades, natural colors and materials.

Veterans Park

The Veterans Park play equipment will be replaced with a “challenge theme” play area that will appeal to kids who are into sports and fitness, and will offer a variety of sports activities on the park site. The park is a popular spot for soccer, basketball, handball, open play like tag, and is a place for adults with strollers to walk along the sidewalk path. The new 2-5 year old and 5-12 year old playground structures, climbing structure and swings are supplemented with challenge course pieces designed for climbing over and through, maneuvering in and around the play space

Whaley Park

“Art, Science and Music” is the perfect theme for the new Whaley Park play equipment, as the park is home to the wildly popular summer music and arts camp for youth. Young imaginations will come alive on new 2-5 year old and 5-12 year old equipment with interesting shapes and bright colors. Helix climbers and shadow play pieces are also connected for combined climbing from one end to the other without touching the ground! Trees that create interesting shadows on the playground, climbing structures and swings will engage kids in active play.

Jackson Park

The budget for Jackson Park is smaller and will include a more simple project budgeted at $50,000 to demolish the existing structure and install an updated 2-12 year old play structure, swings and rubberized safety surfacing.

Senior Meal Programs Restored

Chavez Park staff visit with seniors enjoying the restored lunch program. In addition to the meal, the seniors benefit from the positive social interaction

On April 18, the Long Beach City Council voted to allow the local non-profit Women in Action Reaching Out to provide meal service for seniors at Chavez and Silverado Parks. The organization provides healthy meals and nutrition classes to seniors and at-risk families in the Long Beach and South Bay areas and is passionate about changing lives. Due to funding cuts at the Federal level, the previous provider stopped service at the two parks considered to have the lowest participation.

Due to Community Recreation Services Bureau staff effort, these seniors are being accommodated once again.

Both parks will serve hot or cold meals that meet USDA standards Monday through Friday from 12-1 p.m. for a suggested donation of $1.
